

IV Nutrition Therapy - Immune Drip

By: Laurie Rossi, RN

I want to remind everyone about our Intravenous Nutrition Therapies (IV) Vitamin C and Immune Drip this fall. With winter cold and flu season upon us there has never been a better time to consider protecting yourself with Immune Drip therapy. There is actually a wide variety of medical use for Vitamin C. Evidence exists documenting it as one of the best antiviral agents available. Vitamin C, if used at the proper dose, can eliminate and neutralize a wide range of toxins. Vitamin C enhances host resistance, boosts immunity by augmenting the immune systems ability to neutralize bacterial and fungal infections, and facilitates healing. The National Institute of Health has published evidence demonstrating Vitamin C's cancer fighting properties.

It's interesting to note that most organisms make their own Vitamin C. When under stress either by illness or injury, nature provides organisms a means to facilitate healing by synthesizing more ascorbic acid. Intravenous Vitamin C (IVC) is a tool that enables us to increase tissue levels of Vitamin C that otherwise would not be available to the body given in another form. This is particularly important for those individuals who have chronic disease or illness, or have been immune-compromised from surgery, stress, and/or exposure to toxins. These individuals may have severe depletion of certain vitamins and minerals due to their disease state and or prescription use. Their ability to absorb and assimilate vitamins and minerals in their gastrointestinal tract may also be dramatically reduced. IVC may even help reduce the severity and duration of a current cold or infection, offer immune protection when traveling, and enhance immune function and speed healing when having surgery.

Our Immune Drip contains a number of vitamins and minerals that assist in boosting immunity and aiding the body in functions necessary to promote healing. It contains Vitamin C, B5, B6, B-complex, and Folic Acid. It contains minerals such as Magnesium, Potassium, Zinc, Chromium, Selenium, Calcium, and trace minerals. The most wonderful thing about this treatment is that it works WITH your body. These substances are natural to the body and when given in proper doses are safe with very little, if any, side effects. If you have any questions at all, any member of our caring staff will be happy to assist you.

Your Journey to Health & Healing,
Laurie Ross, RN

Website: www.middlepathmedicine.com

E-mail: info@middlepathmedicine.com